had 4 sections with objectives for each clearly defined

The objective were good! Action verbs were employed extensively rather than the unhelpful "understand" we see far too often in Foundations units.

The format of the paper discussions was the most effective of the bunch. Very clear, and guided. I learned a lot from it. I was unfortunately unable to attend, but the lecture was nearly as valuable recorded.

These lectures were well organized and clearly presented - much better than most so far!

For once, an asigned paper was not over my head or too information dense.

The paper they selected was really good and very easy to understand!

Again, hard to answer: One was, one was not.

The professor entertains all questions (good and otherwise, IMO), but has a tendency to spend too much time trying to answer them, thus both lectures ran overtime. This was fine for me, but if I had another class to attend, it might be problematic.

I unfortunately was sick for the paper discussion but I did enjoy the material and how it was taught.

I enjoyed the formatting of this section

More of less, we ran a little overtime on each day.

She went over the time limit and we were running out of time today so the rest of the paper discussion was rushed.

Best use of time so far

For the most part. While it's nice to have 3 breaks in 2 hours, I think 2 would have been plenty.

It was too fast today's discussion due to running out of time and needing time to do the quiz.

9) For me, the most effective/enlightening component of today's class was.....

The design of ASO

Learning about non-canonical protein translation.

Learning more about how to interpret RNA-seq data was helpful to me as I've not encountered it much before.

The paper was my favorite part. It was so compelling and especially because it was regarding a child.

RT-PCR

Less review, more time on the experimental techniques we were supposed to be able to present cogently.

Nothing
